PART II
SECTION C
NARRATIVE SUMMARY

A. On 1 May 1971, Companies I, K, and M were transported from their respective AO's to Camp 14 to begin preparation for the Battalion's redeployment. Operational control of Company L was transferred from 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines back to 3d Battalion, 1st Marines on 1 May 1971 and Company L returned to Camp 14 for standdown. Company K manned positions along the Battalion and Regimental ridgelines until 7 May.

B. AIR SUPPORT

FIXED WING

Due to the fact that 3d Battalion, 1st Marines began standdown 1 May, there was negative fixed wing support during the reporting period.

ROTARY WING AIRCRAFT

On 1 May, Rotary Wing Aircraft lifted a total of eight platoons (350 men) from Companies I, K, L, and M to Camp 14 to prepare for redeployment.

C. ARTILLERY

For the period 1 May to 9 May 1971, Battery "C"(Rein), 1st Battalion, 11th Marines commenced standdown activities corresponding with 3d Battalion, 1st Marines. Battery "C"(Rein), continued to provide support to the TAOR with two towed 155mm Howitzers until 7 May 1971.

The Artillery Liaison Section commenced standdown on 1 May 1971 with the closing of the Fire Support Coordination Center.

All Forward Observer teams returned to Battery "C" when the companies of 3d Battalion, 1st Marines stood down on 1 May 1971.

LOGISTICS1. ENGINEER ASSISTANCE AND OTHER CONSTRUCTION

a. During the period, preparations were made for engineer dismantlement of the cantonment. All sandbags on non-essential buildings and bunkers were removed and destroyed, home-made and expedient furniture was given to the S-5 for distribution, or destroyed. Water pipes and electrical wiring were left intact.

2. SUPPLY

a. Although the Battalion officially stood down on 1 May, Company K remained operational until 7 May for security functions and required continued supply support. Routine resupply items were stocked and staged, and the final resupply delivery was made on 4 May. Supply assistance was received from 2d Battalion, 1st Marines.

3. MAINTENANCE

a. The only tactical equipment repair orders submitted were for limited technical inspections to assign material codes for excess property not authorized at Camp Pendleton. 570 individual items were processed in anticipation of redistribution instructions.

SECTION H
COMMUNICATIONS

A. PERSONNEL

Due to redeployment and transfers, the platoon strength dwindled to one Officer and 70 enlisted Marines. However, virtually all of these are again under the direct cognizance of the Communications Officer, as the liaison teams and company and platoon radiomen have returned from the units to which they had been attached.

B. EQUIPMENT

All equipment which had been evacuated to FLC/FSR has been recovered.

C. OPERATIONS/TRAINING

The platoon continued skeletal support of the battalion which was confined to minimal landline communications, courier message service to and from III MAB and logistical support of the Battalion's perimeter defense force.

Formal training has been postponed in deference to the requirements and preparation for redeployment.
