2. (C) S-2 Intelligence

a. During the month of December, enemy activity within the 1st Military Police Battalion TAOR remained at a low level. There were several high threat rocket periods but only one attack occurred. The attack came on 21 December at 2142. It consisted of one 140mm rocket which landed at BT220733 causing minor damage to a fence. Expected surges in enemy activity due to occur on several Communist holidays during the latter part of the month failed to materialize. There were no terrorist attacks within the Danang Vital Area during the month.

b. Contact with the enemy was restricted to nine incidents of harassing small arms fire (SAF) and one boobytrap detonation. There were negative casualties and damage.

c. Current intelligence estimates for the Danang Vital Area predict a continuing low level of enemy activity. The threat of rocket attacks will remain high, particularly during the early part of January when illumination is lowest. The enemy retains the power to launch rockets almost at will into Danang Vital Area. There are no indications at this time of an increase in terrorist activities.

d. The S-2 office issued four security clearances and thirty-three authorizations for access to classified matter.
