E. New Techniques Employed

(1) Two fire support bases were closed during the period covered by this report; FSB GURKHA and FSB SHEPHERD.

(2) At FSB GURKHA, bunker overhead covers were removed and all useable material extracted with the exception of the matting in three gunpits and overhead cover of the ammunition pits used for these guns. This was done because of the expected reestablishment of these positions prior to closing FSB ARGONNE.

(3) At FSB SHEPHERD all useable material was again extracted but the bunkers were not dismantled. Since FSB SHEPHERD was constructed as a permanent FSB, the construction technique utilized involved extensive excavation into the steep slopes. The removal of overhead cover and resultant erosion would have rendered the positions useless for future occupancy.

For the first two weeks of November, primary intelligence interest was continued in the area to the north and west of Khe Sanh. Primary interest had shifted to this area of the AO, specifically for the development of FSB's ALPINE and ARGONIE in the northwestern portion of the AO. Interest remained in this area, gradually shifting east to include FSB's WINCHESTER and LZ SIERRA along the Central DMZ area. The intelligence collection effort during the reporting period began to show certain areas of concentrated enemy activity.
