12. Results. 109 confirmed KIA, 190 probable KIA, 2 confirmed WIA, 3 probable WIA, 17 bunkers destroyed, 75 structures destroyed, 62 structures damaged, 4 boats destroyed, 3 boats damaged, 9 secondary explosions, and considerable damage to trenches.

13. Administrative Matters. Administrative Plan 30L-66 was applied to this operation.

a. Supplies. All classes of supply were provided from the Nui Dang LSA with excellent results.

b. Maintenance. No significant events

c. Ammunition Handling. No significant events

d. Communications. Due to T/O and T/E limitations, it was necessary to borrow both personnel and equipment from other units in order to support the operation. Even with the borrowed equipment, there was an inadequate backup for possible equipment failures. The MRC-109 proved to be very useful, particularly for long range communications. However, a problem developed where by one radio cut out two or more other radios. This was primarily with the MRC-109 but also occurred with PRC-25 radios. The frequency spread was such that this should not have occurred and antennas were separated to the maximum extent possible. It became necessary to discontinue use of some frequencies in order to avoid this problem.

14. Special Equipment and Techniques. No significant events

15. Commander's Analysis. This operation provided valuable experience in the following areas:

1. Planning, coordinating and controlling artillery fires at battery level.

2. The logistics problems involved with resupply and movement by helicopter over an extended period of time.

12. Results. 11 probable KIA, 10 emplacements destroyed, 1 trench line destroyed, and several structures destroyed.

13. Administrative Matters. Administrative Plan 301-66 applied to this operation.

a. Supplies. All classes of supply were provided from the Quang Ngai LSA except for class V for the 155 Gun and 8" Howitzer platoons. Results were generally good except that the lack of sufficient helicopters did, at times, result in Battery "H" (-) getting dangerously low in ammunition and water. It should be noted that when an artillery unit is helilifted into a position and must be resupplied by air, the helicopter squadron at MAG must be in all phases of planning for the operation. During this operation difficulty was experienced in getting helicopters for the resupply of Battery "H". While this did not develop into a serious problem it could have very easily if the infantry units which they supported had become heavily engaged for any long duration.

- b. Maintenance. No significant events.
- c. Ammunition Handling. No significant events.
- d. Communications. No significant events.

14. Special Equipment and Techniques. Nosignificant events.

15. Commander's Analysis. The operation provided valuable experience in the following areas:

- a. Close coordination of artillery fires with and in support of multi-national forces.
- b. Planning and execution of saturation missions.
- c. The tactical employment within a task groupment of light, medium and heavy artillery.
