YEARBOOK & PRINTING CLASSES

A MESSAGE FROM MR. C. O. TILLMAN, SUPT.

CHILOCCO? WHAT IS CHILOCCO?

Chilocco is a light house, a beacon that beckons to those on the troubled sea of life.

Chilocco is the light in the window of that prairie cabin seen after a long hard day.

Chilocco is the Statue of Liberty, in it is hope, anticipation, the future for the abused, rejected, maligned, unwanted.

Chilocco is mom, dad, sister, brother, love.

Chilocco is that pathway covered with deep snow that leads from buckskin to blue jeans.

Chilocco is Indian Tribes fighting for education for their Indian youth.

Chilocco in its closing is sorrow.

Chilocco, is another, in a long list of broken promises.

A MESSAGE FROM MR. DEE GREGORY, PRINCIPAL

Someday in the future, some historian will pull together all the historical facts concerning the Chilocco Indian School. From these facts will emerge so many wonderful, beautiful, tragic, humorous, exciting, happy, and sad events. They will be so intriguing that a person will have to stretch the imagination to believe these things have really occurred at such a place as Chilocco.

Chilocco means many things to a lot of people. The image was never that of a cold traditional school, but rather a place of activity with the center of focus on activities involving both students and staff.

Chilocco in its early days was called the "light of the prairie". At the present time this "light" is flickering and in June of 1980, the "light" will be extinguished.

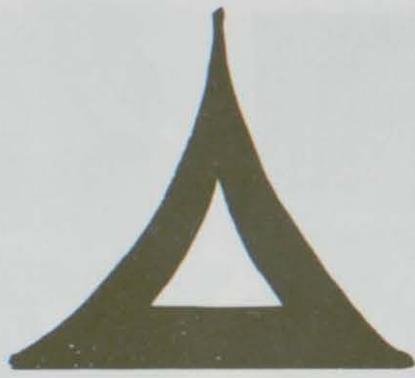

This event will be significant to many Indian youngsters who have been a part of the making of Chilocco, especially those of you who are presently enrolled.

The entire school staff have contributed in their own way to your education. As the school year ends, there is always the feeling that we might have done things better. You students will probably reflect as to whether you did the best you could in your school work.

As the school year 1979-80 winds down, we can hardly believe the many things that have happened to Chilocco. Regardless of the pressures, the school year progressed in an orderly manner. This can be attributed to the professionalism of the staff and the efforts of the student body.

The school staff extends its congratulations to the graduating seniors, hoping, that many of your goals will be reached as you join the "mainstream" of life.

To those who have further school years, we offer encouragement for you to continue your high school career wherever you choose.
